More government jobs for people with intellectual disability

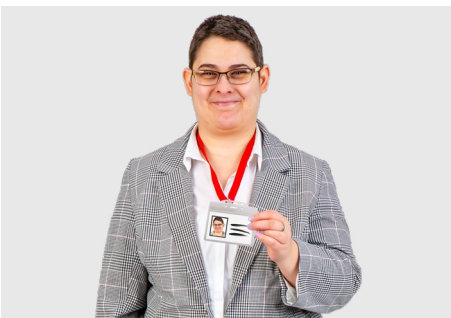

People with intellectual disability want to have jobs like everyone else.

Having a job helps you pay for the things you need.

It helps you pay for the things you want to do in your life.

Having a job can make you feel good about yourself.

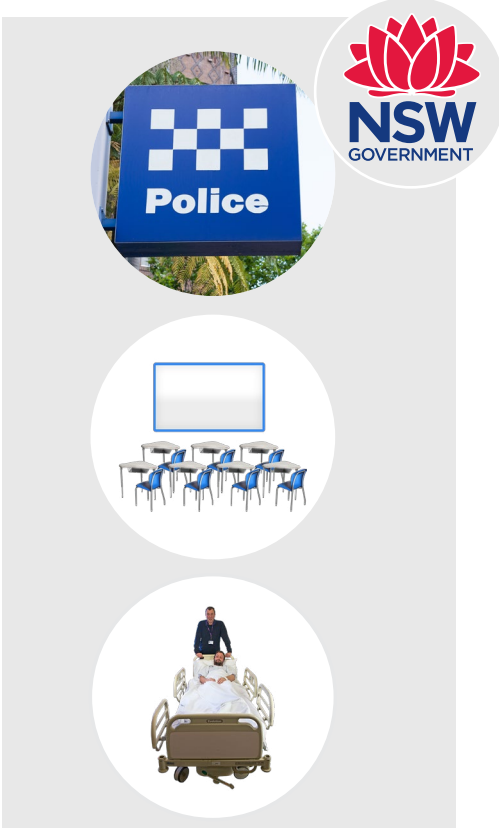

People with intellectual disability have the right to work like everyone else.

The NSW Government says it will employ more people with disability.

There should also be Government jobs for people with intellectual disability.

Government jobs are jobs at workplaces that the Government looks after like

- Police
- Public schools
- Hospitals

How things are now

Right now there are not many people with intellectual disability in Government jobs.

Most people with intellectual disability work in Australian Disability Enterprises.

They are called ADE for short.

At an ADE people with disability get paid very little.

At an ADE people mostly work with other people with disability.

When young people with intellectual disability leave school they often start working at an ADE.

Young people are not asked what else they want to do in their life.

Many people with intellectual disability do not

- Get paid well
- Work in mainstream workplaces.

Mainstream workplaces are workplaces where people with and without disability work together.

Many workplaces do not know how to support people with intellectual disability.

They are not sure if people with intellectual disability can do the work.

What needs to happen

These are the things CID wants the NSW Government to do by 2025.

The NSW Government must have more Government jobs for people with intellectual disability.

They should write a plan that says how they will hire more people with intellectual disability.

The plan must say how they will make sure people with intellectual disability stay in a job for a long time if they want to.

The plan needs to be for people with intellectual disability who are

- Adults
- Young people leaving school.

People with intellectual disability must get the support they need to do their job well.
